HISTORICAL SKETCH.

In the year 1855 two public libraries were established in the city, the Peoria Library and the Peoria Mercantile Library, which were consolidated in November, 1856, under the name and title of The Peoria City Library. The number of books in the two libraries at the time of the union amounted to less than two thousand volumes, a considerable number of which were donations, but among those donations were embraced some of the most rare and valuable books in the Library at the present time.

In the spring of 1865, through the aid of our then representative, the Hon. Alex. McCoy, a charter was obtained from the Legislature, and the charter name of Peoria Mercantile Library Association assumed. Under the charter a new constitution was adopted and a re-organization effected into two departments, a Library Department and an Exchange Department, each department having a separate Board of Directors and the two Boards united forming one General Board.

A subscription was immediately started to raise funds for the purchase of a suitable property for the Association. The late T. S. Bradley, Esq., headed the list with a gift of $1000 and was most generously followed by public spirited citizens in like liberal proportion, realizing in a few weeks the very handsome sum of $13,262.50.

With the sum so raised the Association purchased of Mr. John L. Griswold, for the sum of $10,000, the house and lot on the corner of Main and Jefferson streets—without doubt the most convenient site in the city—and at once proceeded to fit up the building for its new uses. In July of 1865, the Library was re-opened in its new quarters—the second story of the present Library building.

The Library preserves with grateful recognition among its records the names of all its benefactors, from its origin in 1855, down to the present time, and it is interesting to read how large a number of our best citizens have, at various times aided with their counsels and their gifts in the growth and permanent establishment of the present Mercantile Library Association. But it certainly will not be esteemed invidious to mention here the name of L. G. Pratt, Esq., as the one to whose excellent judgment and unwearied zeal the Library is indebted more, perhaps, than to any other one person, for the success of the effort made in the Spring of 1865.

The Exchange Department of the Association, originally intended to provide a Merchants' Exchange and Reading-Room—a kind of open club room—supplied with the daily papers and evening dispatches, for the use of the business men of the city, did not receive the support from the public that had been anticipated, and after a few years, closed its rooms in the lower story of the Library building. These rooms, as well as the rear end of the Library lot, are now leased and the proceeds controlled by the General Board.

Neither the income nor the membership of the Library is as large as could be wished. The advantages to be derived from access to a large public Library are of such a nature as not to make themselves urgently felt except to a few. Only those who have received some considerable culture, and in whom a fondness for reading is already well developed, will so appreciate its benefits as to be willing to spare from more immediately pressing wants the sum necessary to meet the annual dues of a subscription library. It is, therefore, not without strong hopes, based on most reasonable grounds, that the directors and friends of the Peoria Mercantile Library look forward to a third and still more permanent re-organization of the Library, in the near future, under the act passed by the State Legislature at its last session, to "Authorize cities, incorporated towns and townships to establish and maintain Free Public Libraries and Reading Rooms."

The present catalogue, which has been urgently needed for some years, has been formed under rather peculiar circumstances. It being impossible for the Librarian, in addition to the constantly increasing routine duties of the Library, to perform the work alone, the directors esteemed themselves fortunate in securing assistance from a lady whose culture, wide range of acquaintance with books and deep interest in the Library, fitted her well for the difficult task. Under her supervision the card catalogue has been prepared, and from that, the manuscript catalogue for the printer. In the proof reading—no small portion of the task—the directors have lent such aid as the pressing duties of their daily avocations would permit. No one can appreciate how extremely difficult a thing it is to draw up a complete and accurate library catalogue so well as he who has himself once undertaken it. This somewhat deprecatory explanation, will, therefore, it is hoped, secure a charitable judgment of such errors, omissions and imperfections as may be discovered in the following pages.

Peoria, August, 1872.

SYSTEM OF CLASSIFICATION.

The following catalogue is in two parts—an Alphabetical Catalogue, in which each work in the Library is entered under the name of its author, or when that is unknown, under the principal word of its title, and a Classified Index, in which each work is entered under its proper subject. To have prepared simply an alphabetical list of authors' names would have been a comparatively easy task, but no such list would have been a satisfactory catalogue.

"There can be but one really thorough method of arranging the contents of a library, the systematic method, furnishing an index of subjects to serve as a guide to the separate works in the library on any particular subject."

Such a classified index serves a double purpose. It not only shows what treasures in any particular branch of learning the library may possess, but it also shows at a glance, what are the deficiences to be supplied, which is a matter of almost equal importance. To arrange such a system of classification, however, one that shall be complete and exhaustive, is an effort of the highest philosophy, for it implies no less than a classification of all "human learning as preserved in books," a classification of the workings, developments and productivity of the mind of man, nay, of the mind of the Creator Himself, so far as that mind is revealed to us through the phenomena of the universe. To this great task the loftiest intellects have at times applied themselves, and still left the work imperfect. In Edwards' Memoirs of Libraries are cited thirty-two celebrated schemes of classification, and among them those of Bacon, Bentham, Coleridge, Ampere, Leibnitz, D'Alembert, and Schleiermacher.

It is needless to say that the plain business men, who compose the present Board of Directors of the Mercantile Library, would not presume to improve on what these philosophers have left imperfect. They were compelled to choose from among such schemes as lay before them, and after much comparison of the various systems, including those now in use in the Boston Public Library, the Public Library and Mercantile Library of Cincinnati, the Mercantile Library of St. Louis, and others, have adopted, without hesitation, as being the most complete and exhaustive of any that have fallen under their observation, the Baconian System as elaborated by Mr. Wm. T. Harris, of St. Louis. For a detailed account and explanation of that system reference is made to the Journal of Speculative Philosophy, Vol. IV., page 114, of which Mr. Harris is editor, and also to the catalogue of the St. Louis Public School Library, where the system is for the first time applied. This scheme, which the reader will find immediately following, may at first sight repel by its apparently cumbersome minuteness of detail, but these details will be found to be inherent in the subject, and cannot be avoided in any complete system. A few moments' study will soon give one a clear insight into the three grand divisions, SCIENCE, ART, HISTORY, and into the symmetrical order and development of the various divisions, classes and subclasses under them. Without any reference to its use in the catalogue, a familiar acquaintance with this scheme as a classification of the workings of the human mind, will be found to be both interesting and useful.
